Formation and Early Engagements

Formed in the spring of 1861, the Hood Texas Brigade initially consisted of four regiments: the 1st, 4th, 5th, and 18th Texas Infantry. Led by Brigadier General John Bell Hood, the brigade quickly gained renown for its tenacity and unwavering loyalty to the Confederate cause.

Their baptism of fire came at the Battle of Eltham's Landing, Virginia, in May 1862. Despite suffering heavy losses, the brigade's resolute stand against overwhelming Union forces earned them widespread admiration.

Gettysburg and Beyond

The Hood Texas Brigade played a pivotal role in the Battle of Gettysburg in July 1863. During the infamous "Pickett's Charge," the brigade spearheaded the Confederate assault on the Union center. Their valiant efforts, though ultimately unsuccessful, cemented their reputation as an elite fighting force.

Following Gettysburg, the brigade fought in numerous other battles, including Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, and Missionary Ridge. Their unwavering determination and ability to endure grueling conditions under relentless artillery and rifle fire earned them the respect of both friend and foe.

Final Battles and Surrender

As the war drew to a close, the Hood Texas Brigade participated in the Atlanta Campaign and the subsequent March to the Sea. Despite dwindling numbers and dwindling resources, they continued to fight with unwavering resolve.

Finally, on April 26, 1865, the brigade surrendered along with the remnants of the Confederate Army of Tennessee in Durham, North Carolina. Their long and arduous journey had come to an end.
